Rainfall

Think about your hometown. Does it get a lot of rain in summer?

How much rain is normal? Rainfall can vary from year to year.

Therefore, it is important to find the average. The following chart shows the average rainfall in a city for each month over 10 years.

From the chart, we can see that spring is the driest season.

During March, April, and May, the average total rainfall for the entire season is about 35 mm. Summer is the wettest season of the year. July has the most rainfall during this season. In both fall and winter, there is moderate rainfall, with fall having a little more rain than winter.

Thanks for your listening. See you next time!
